AT GREENWICH COMMUNITY COLLEGE, OUR FOCUS IS ON GETTING OUR STUDENTS INTO WORK. HERE ARE JUST SOME OF OUR SUCCESS STORIES.

HOSPITALITY AND CATERING STUDENTS COOK UP A STORM AT THE BRITISH MUSEUM

Three Greenwich Community College students snapped up the chance to work with top end events catering company, Alison Price & Co. They delivered catering for prestigious event at the British Museum and Pennington Street London Docks.

Kayla Williams, Alhassan Bangura and Sukbakur Thapa put their canapé production skills to the ultimate test, preparing canapés for an event to celebrate the British Museum's Sicilian Exhibition.

Richard Cubbin, Director of Food Services, Alison Price & Co said, "We were delighted to work with GCC students. They rose to the challenge of preparing meals for a prestigious event. They showed real talent, creativity, a can-do- attitude and a real passion for their chosen skill. I'm confident they will go on to have successful careers in the sector."

GOLDWELL PRAISES GREENWICH COMMUNITY COLLEGE HAIR & BEAUTY STUDENTS

Fifteen Greenwich Community College Level 2 Hairdressing students, who recently completed a challenging industry technical project endorsed by Goldwell, were praised for their skills by Ken Sage, Business Programme Manager, Goldwell.

Students were asked to create an image based on one of three themes: a historical look, a fantasy look or a special occasion. Tasks included creating a mood board, researching and developing a design plan, recreating the look on a live model and presenting their designs to Ken Sage, Business Programme Manager, Goldwell.

Ken Sage, Goldwell said, "I'm extremely impressed by the range of designs, level of skill and knowledge displayed in the technical project. The project was designed to test the skills and knowledge the students need in real life, such as taking a brief from a client and researching and developing mood boards which is standard industry practice."

Heavy fines for rogue traders

A ROGUE landlord has been fined more than £6,000 for a litany of offences, including an absence of smoke detectors, at a house in Woolwich.

Bexley Magistrates' Court heard how environmental health officers from the council inspected the Frances Street property in August 2015 after a tenant complained of poor living conditions.

The inspection revealed that all five rooms were occupied by at least one person unrelated to the occupants of the other rooms. Most of the rooms failed to comply with basic housing regulations with missing smoke detectors and widespread use of electric socket adaptors, a potential fire hazard.

During the visit, three tenants confirmed that they paid rent to Oner Arslanboga, the owner of the premises.

Following the inspection, the officers assessed that the property was being used as a house of multiple occupation (HMO) for which it was not licensed.

At a court hearing on April 18, Mr Arslanboga and Ahmed Kawsar, who represented letting agents South East Residential Limited, were found guilty of failing to license a house in multiple occupation (HMO), in breach of the Housing Act 2004, and of failing to comply with HMO management regulations.

Mr Kawsar had previously claimed that, as the managing agent, the company was not informed by the owner of the

New website for safeguarding board

RESIDENTS can find out about the valuable work of the Royal Greenwich Safeguarding Adults Board via a new website, which is now live.

The board is independent of the council and is made up of reps from several agencies including the NHS, council, police, fire and ambulance services and other organisations in the borough. It aims to make sure that local safeguarding services are working together and are effective. The new website contains information about how the board achieves this. Readers can also find out what abuse and neglect is and how to report it if they are concerned about someone.

To mark the launch of the new website GT spoke to Mark Godfrey, the independent chair of the safeguarding adults board, to get an insight into its role and his work since he took up the position last August.

He said: "The Safeguarding Adults Board is about working together to prevent abuse and neglect before it happens, and also to ensure that services are investigating and supporting people where this does occur."

"There has been a lot of good work done in the royal borough and we are working so that we see even more progress in the future. I have been the independent chair for almost a year now and there are of course many challenges, but we are creating an even stronger multi-agency approach, involving collaboration with many organisations and other partnerships working on key issues such as sexual exploitation and human trafficking or modern slavery."

Mark explained further about the board's approach to safeguarding adults in the royal borough, saying: "The board aims to promote wellbeing for local people and ensure that the views, wishes, feelings and beliefs are taken into account when there are safeguarding concerns - it's really important that we work to empower people to make their own decisions as much as possible. A further key aim is for the board to actively work with local communities to raise awareness to prevent abuse and neglect, and also to support people to report it wherever it occurs."

The new website will play a valuable role in the board's work and Mark explained: "Local people can go online to find out about the board, its work, and my role as the independent chair. It will also prove a vital tool to raising awareness of safeguarding issues and ultimately helping people to live safely and access support when it is required."

Correction

LAST week's page 1 story 'Here for the bear' incorrectly reported that Eltham Hill primary school was involved in the design competition for the 'Buddy Bear' presented to the royal borough. Of course our story should have read Eltham Hill secondary school. Apologies to the school and reader for any confusion caused.

FLYING THEIR FLAGS: pupils in national costume, right, staff, pupils and parents enjoy music, dance and food from around the world

Celebration of culture

Windrush hosts international day

PRIMARY school pupils partied in the playground to celebrate their differences.

Windrush Primary School hosted its second International Day on May 26, inviting pupils to attend in their national dress and celebrate the wide range of cultures of the 47 different countries that they come from.

The festivities culminated in an after-school party where parents were invited to attend and bring along traditional foods typical of their country's cuisine.

Throughout the week, Greenwich-based dance company Protein Dance Ltd had worked with the pupils, running dance and drumming workshops, with students giving a final performance to staff and parents outside in the school grounds. There was also a fashion show where the colour and varieties of traditional dress got to take centre stage.

First in queue for affordable homes

RESIDENTS hoping to buy their own home through the Share to Buy scheme can make sure they can find out about new affordable properties being built in the borough.

The council has been working to ensure that its residents are first to hear about new intermediate homes going up.

It has set up an intermediate housing list in conjunction with the mayor of London property portal, Share to Buy.

If you live or work within in the borough, all you have to do is tick the Greenwich priority service box www.sharetobuy.com/ Greenwich to ensure that you are first to find out about all the new homes available in Greenwich.

Cllr Danny Thorpe, cabinet member for regeneration & sustainability, said: "Greenwich is the fourth largest provider of new dwellings in London and has set out plans to build 25,590 new homes in the borough by 2021 so it is important our residents can be the first to find out about these new properties."

Those opted into the Greenwich Priority Service will receive exclusive property alerts and newsletters ensuring you are kept right up to date with new properties in the borough.

The Eden project comes to Greenwich

A ROYAL Greenwich primary school has officially opened a biodome, which was built using £10,000 of Lottery funding.

Mayor Olu Babatola officially opened the biodome in a ribbon cutting event at St Margaret Clitherow Primary School on Thursday May 26.

The school applied for the Lottery funding in the second half of 2015 and after being granted the sum of money, the biodome was installed and ready for use by February of this year.

The biodome is on school grounds and already pupils have been enjoying the fruits of their labours. The first harvest of crops – lettuce and radishes – were offered in the school salad bar at lunchtime for all the pupils to have a taste.

Each class has been assigned one or two beds in the biodome where they will grow their own crops.

They have planted a wide range of vegetables that they are still waiting to ripen including courgettes and pumpkins and they even have a grape vine. Pupils are planning to continue to experiment with seasonal crops and possibilities for use in winter.

Ingrid Collins, science coordinator at the school said: "The dome is to be used by all the students so that they can build their knowledge, starting in reception and progressing all the way through school."

council inspection. He also said that he had informed the owner of the works that needed to be carried out, but Mr Arslanboga refused to pay for the HMO licence and works as it was “expensive”.

Environmental health officers suspected that it was an unlicensed house in multiple occupation when it came to their attention in 2013.

Officers served an improvement notice after an inspection but it was claimed it was not an HMO and applied for a temporary exemption notice so that the premises did not require to be licensed.

Bexley magistrates fined Mr Arslanboga £5,600 and ordered him to pay prosecution costs of £750 as well as a victim surcharge of £120. South East Residents was fined £1,750, prosecution costs totalling £375 and a victim surcharge of £120.

Cllr Jackie Smith, cabinet member for community safety & environment, said: “The Royal Borough of Greenwich is sending a clear message that rogue landlords will absolutely not be tolerated in this borough.

“We are taking a proactive approach across the council to tackle this issue and are increasingly honing in on this minority of landlords who think that they are above the law.”

Cash to fight rogue landlords

THE royal borough is running a campaign against rogue landlords who force tenants to live in squalid and dangerous properties.

Extra funding from the government means it can carry out more raids and inspections, issue a greater number of statutory notices, survey more streets and demolish sheds and prohibited buildings. It will also help the council to root out more ‘beds in sheds’ – where buildings are rented to vulnerable people and migrants by landlords who charge them extortionate rents to live in cramped conditions. Greenwich received £175,000 from a £5 million government pot shared among 46 local authorities with the royal borough awarded the sixth highest amount of money.

Ask about malaria protection

RESIDENTS are being advised to ensure they are protected against malaria before they travel to countries affected by the disease this summer.

Latest figures for 2014 show that south east London had the highest number of reported cases of imported malaria, most in Southwark (96) and Lewisham (70), but there were also 59 cases in Greenwich.

Dr Rachel Heathcock, London's director of health protection for south east London at Public Health England, explained that malaria was a preventable disease and that steps can be taken to avoid infection.

“It is important for people to be aware of the risks when visiting family or friends in malaria affected regions. This is a potentially life-threatening disease but can be prevented by taking anti-malarial medication,” she said.

“The risk can also be significantly reduced by avoiding insect bites through wearing long sleeved tops and trousers between sunset and sunrise; sleeping under a mosquito net; and applying an insect repellent which contains DEET.”

Dr Heathcock said most cases of imported malaria were among people of black African ethnicity and it was important that they took precautions in the same way as other travellers.

“PHE advise that people should not take any risks with their health and should speak to their doctor about medication to prevent malaria, no matter how short the trip,” she said.

● Information and advice about malaria is available on the PHE website at tinyurl.com/h88ad65 or call 020 8327 7018 for a leaflet.

Credit card fraudster prosecuted

A FORMER resident of Abbey Wood has been prosecuted by the royal borough for making counterfeit credit cards.

Kingsley Aimufua, 51, was sentenced to 21 months imprisonment, suspended for two years and ordered to undertake 200 hours of unpaid work within the next 12 months during a case at Blackfriars Crown Court last month.

The case followed long-running investigations by the council's Internal Audit & Anti-Fraud team which began in 2013 when it was identified that over thirty repeated payments were made to Aimufua's Council Tax account for his home in Abbey Wood, using compromised credit card details.

Fraud investigators were alerted because payments made with the counterfeit credit card kept bouncing back. Payments totalling £8,000 were refused although the actual amount owed was just over £1,000.

Investigators soon realised that the payments were being made by cards which were not issued by UK-based banks.

Investigators also found that Mr Aimufua had also moved to a Welling address in 2013 and was the sole director of a company, K Square Associates Ltd in Erith.

During a joint operation by the police and the council fraud team, searches were made of his business and home address.

At his business address they found a quantity of white credit card style blank cards with magnetic strips, a card reader, card printer, card embossing machine and a card cutter.

Mr Aimufua was arrested at his home in Welling where a number of laptops were seized.

Forensic examinations found that the magnetic strip on a small number of the white cards contained information of a credit card number while the laptops had been used to access websites from which compromised card details had

Fun day for pets'

PAWS FOR THOUGHT: dogs with their owners at the event, inset, Rachael Webb with rapper Professor Green

A FUN day held to raise money for abandoned cats and dogs attracted more than a thousand people and their pets to Oxleas Woods.

The event was organised by Rachael Webb from Charlton in memory of her assistance dog Kharn, who was killed by a quad bike three years ago.

Dubbed Kharny Day, the event included a dog show, donkey rides, a visit from a local fire crew with their engine and plenty of children's activities.

Among those who dropped in was rapper Professor Green, who has been making a documentary about dogs.

Rachael told GT: "We're still waiting for all the money to come in but it was such a success that we will be doing it again next year when it will be even bigger and better."

The money raised this year will go to Battersea Cats and Dogs Home and next year Rachael is planning to support the Blue Cross Hospital for animals.

Make merry in Plumstead

THE popular Plumstead Makes Merry Day is back this weekend with more attractions than ever for all the family.

Started in 1975, the borough's longest-running community festival is from 12-6pm on Saturday, June 11 and is once again packed full of music and dance, arts and activities, and numerous stalls and workshops.

Sarah Harper, chair of the Plumstead Make Merry Association, said: "Our small team of volunteers have been very busy this year organising a festival on a tight budget, and we are proud to say that we have a day of fun and entertainment planned for our community."

"We value the support of those that help organise and attend the event each year and we hope that again we can provide a great day out for everyone. It is an event that has been enjoyed by generations of local families and it means so much to so many people."

Festivities start at mid-day in the main bandstand area where a programme of music and dance performances will continue throughout the day.

Visitors can hear acoustic and spoken word performances while enjoying refreshments in the Acoustic Café and children can take part in free dance and music sessions in the Under1 Roof area.

Workshops for people of all ages include felt-making, drumming, theatre and mindfulness.

● The festival has been shortlisted as Regional Community Initiative of the Year as part of the Britain Has Spirit initiative, a national campaign searching for deserving volunteers. New help for Nepalese people with diabetes

THE Nepalese community in Greenwich now has its own Diabetes UK support group.

The group meets at 114-116 Plumstead High Street, at 11am on the 15th of every month offering information and support to those living with diabetes and family and carers of those with the condition.

Figures for Greenwich show that 13,618 people have diabetes and Asian people are at a higher risk of developing Type 2 diabetes.

Group chair Em Bahadur Gurung said: "Recently, some of us attended a health awareness event organised by Community Empowerment and Support Initiatives (CESI)-UK. This event was facilitated by Diabetes UK which outlined all the benefits of being part of a group - support, information and friendship - and so we decided to form a group which focused on the Nepalese community."

Ruth Szotten, volunteer development manager for Diabetes UK, said: "We were delighted to hear that Em Bahadur Gurung and his friends were inspired to set up a group for Nepalese people who have diabetes after hearing a talk from one of our volunteers."

"Diabetes can be a difficult condition to manage and people with diabetes can learn from each other. We want to help people find a balance between living their lives and keeping in good health."

Cheers for volunteers

GIVE US A HAND: deputy mayor Cllr Peter Brooks and reps from the Volunteers Centre Greenwich give information on the benefits of volunteering VOLUNTEER Week was officially launched in General Gordon Square last week with an information stall for potential volunteers.

Deputy Mayor Peter Brooks attended the event on June 1 in Woolwich organised by the Volunteer Centre Greenwich. Centre reps aimed to recruit new volunteers and highlight the benefits of volunteering, such as acquiring new skills and confidence.

Cllr Brooks was able to see some local volunteers in action as they spoke to residents about the benefits of volunteering and 45 people registered an interest during the morning. He was also given a tour of the Volunteer Centre, which is also based in Woolwich, and saw first-hand where local residents can get support, training and career-building advice as part of the service.

Running until June 12, Volunteer Week also celebrates the contribution of volunteers in the local community and aims to attract more people to get involved in volunteering roles.

The volunteer centre helps local charities find great volunteers, develop their volunteer management programmes and build their skills through training. For more information about volunteering in the borough, visit www.vcgreenwich.org.uk or call 020 8317 3817.

Berkeley
Designed for life

A HOST of blockbusters featuring the royal borough as a backdrop are due to hit the big screen this year, joining the scores of films that have already put Greenwich on the movie map. Laraine Clay finds out how the royal borough has been...

Stealing the scene

IT was just a few weeks ago that Hollywood star Matt Damon was spotted filming in Woolwich town centre.

And the red carpets will soon be out for the premiere in July for his latest outing as Jason Bourne which saw Woolwich Arsenal DLR station transformed into a subway station in Athens and a money transfer shop in Plumstead Road take on a plethora of Greek signage.

The production team for Bridget Jones' Baby, due to be released in September, also came to Woolwich, this time shooting scenes in Sainsbury's supermarket and outside the Natwest Bank.

The magnificence of the Old Royal Naval College and Cutty Sark Gardens made them ideal locations for the makers of Now You See Me 2 which also comes out in July, starring Daniel Radcliffe and Morgan Freeman.

Shots for that movie took on a different perspective as the film crew flew over Greenwich in a helicopter on New Year's Eve, giving a new aspect to the borough's popularity as a film location.

Council leader Cllr Denise Hyland said: "It is obviously no surprise to us that so many directors want to come to the royal borough and use our wonderful buildings and landscape for these films, and we are delighted to welcome them."

"We do all we can to facilitate the crews and make filming easy for them, and making sure there is minimum disruption for our residents and the people who work here. Tourism is worth millions of pounds to Royal Greenwich each year and every shot that is taken in these blockbuster movies helps bring in more visitors."

It's not just the movie-makers that use our facilities. Television series Jekyll and Hyde was filmed at Eltham Palace, police comedy drama Babylon saw rolling on various Woolwich and scenes for Master Chef v Blackheath.

The borough can also be spotted in TV commercials, from Boots to Rover to McDonalds and the H&M. Cllr Denise Scott-McDonald, a member for culture, creative industry and community wellbeing, said: "It was the first borough in London to have a dedicated film office and it has paid off. There is filming taking place in the borough on average 300 days a year which proves what a popular location it is and the support that we give."

The film unit gets involved from the first request to film in the borough to the last shots taken, ensuring everything runs smoothly for all those involved and those trying to go about their lives.

The location manager for the TV series wrote: "I have worked with the Greenwich Film Unit recently and they were very tricky and time-consuming. With the close support of the council, we were able to get the necessary permissions from the council departments and local residents. The shoot was a great success thanks to their efforts."

Location manager Michael worked with the film unit for a year, wrote: "The Greenwich Film Unit worked tirelessly to make it a success."

The film unit has an extensive library on the council website and the many and varied places that it has to offer for film makers. Residents and businesses can also apply to rent properties as possible film locations.

Public support appeal to save historic portrait

A PUBLIC campaign to bring an historic portrait of Queen Elizabeth I to Greenwich has got off to an encouraging start.

The appeal to save the Armada Portrait of Queen Elizabeth I aims to raise millions so it can be housed in the Queen's House, Greenwich, where the queen was born.

Launched a fortnight ago, organisers say there had been a fantastic response from the public.

The portrait was painted around 1590 to commemorate the most famous conflict of the monarch's reign - the failed invasion of England by the Spanish Armada in 1588.

Possibly commissioned by Sir Francis Drake, it has been passed down generations of his descendants until going on the market with a price tag of around £10 million.

The Art Fund is to give a grant of £1 million and Royal Museums Greenwich (RMG) will pay £400,000 towards the cost but that leaves £8.6 million still to be found.

The two organisations hope to be able to raise the money through a public appeal so the painting can be saved for the national collection. If the campaign is successful, the portrait will hang in the Queen's House in Greenwich, on the site of the original Greenwich Palace where Elizabeth I was born.

Kevin Fewster, director of RMG, said this was a "once in a lifetime opportunity" for the Royal Museums to acquire the painting.

REGAL MAGNIFICENCE: the Armada portrait features the queen in her late 50s in an oil painting on oak panels

"Greenwich is the perfect home for the Armada portrait. Elizabeth I was born at Greenwich Palace in 1533 and the early 17th century Queen's House, where we would like to display the painting, is the last remaining part of the palace," he said.

"If our campaign is successful, it will be the centrepiece of a lively programme of displays, talks, tours, and education initiatives. With 2016 being the 90th birthday year of our present Queen, there could not be a more appropriate way to celebrate the second great Elizabethan era."

Stephen Deuchar, director of the Art Fund, said: "This campaign is a huge challenge but we believe in the power of popular support to make great things happen. This picture truly belongs at Greenwich, and having it here forever is tantalisingly within our grasp."

As well as running the public Save the Armada appeal, donations will be sought from various trusts, funds, foundations and individuals.

Donations can be made at artfund.org/armada or text 70800 Armada to give £10. Every public donation will be matched pound for pound.

Park parties for Queen's birthday

MANY of the borough's parks will be buzzing with activities this Royal birthday weekend as Parksfest continues.

The Friends of Shrewsbury Park in Plumstead are celebrating their tenth annual summer festival with events on both days.

On Saturday, June 11 from 2-4pm a jazz band, choir and Morris dancing will be performing alongside the tea and cake stall.

On Sunday, the Friends will host the popular dog show in the park from 1-4pm.

In Mottingham, the Friends of The Tarn will be celebrating the Queen's 90th birthday with a tea party and afternoon of performances, music and dancing, and children's activities from 2.30-5pm.

Greenwich Youth Band will hold a free concert of music for all the family in Eltham Park South off Glenesk Road, Eltham on Sunday from 3-4.30pm.

Parksfest is part of the Royal Greenwich Festivals - for more details visit www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/festivals

Drama lives up to expectations

THE Roan Theatre Company's adaptation of Great Expectations proved a popular choice for their latest production at Eltham's Bob Hope Theatre.

Crowds of more than 100 went along each night to see the magic of Dickens' story unfold, with young Pip played by Lucas Smith, Miss Havisham by Glynis Watson and Estella by Helen Houghton.

Theatre company chairman Graham Johnson said: "It went very well. We had 160 people on the last night so word must have gone round."

The group is now working on a short 10-15 minute performance for a fundraising night for the Bob Hope on June 18 when all the groups that use the theatre have been invited to take part devise a short production.

Roan's excerpt will have a First World War theme to mark the centenary of the start of the battle of the Somme.

For more details about the show, entitled With a Little Help..., visit www.bobhope theatre.co.uk and to find out how to get involved with the Roan Theatre Company go to www.theoantheatrecompany.com
